The structure of a traditional puja

Whether performed at your home or live online, an authentic puja follows the same time-honoured sequence. Here is what your priest does at every ceremony.

1 Sankalp — the sacred vow

The priest takes the sankalp in your name, gotra and intention. This dedicates the merit (punya) of the entire ritual to you and your family — and is what makes a puja performed online or on your behalf fully valid.

2 Avahan — invocation

The deity is invoked into the kalash or idol through mantra, and a lamp is lit. The space is purified with gangajal.

3 Puja & abhishek — the offerings

The shodashopachar (sixteen offerings) — water, flowers, incense, lamp, food and more — are made with Vedic mantras. Abhishek (sacred bathing) is performed where the ritual calls for it.

4 Jaap & havan — chanting & fire

Mantras are chanted the prescribed number of times, and where required a havan (sacred fire offering) is performed, ending with the purnahuti.

5 Aarti & prasad — completion

The ceremony closes with aarti and the distribution of prasad. For online and on-your-behalf pujas, photos and a video are shared, and prasad can be couriered to you.

Online & on-your-behalf pujas are complete rituals

The priest performs the full vidhi with the sankalp in your name — the tradition of commissioning a rite on one's behalf is centuries old, and the merit is yours wherever you are seated.
